Forum discusses school's future

Questions arise over status of new Annenberg consolidation

By Ronald Sal Panuco
Staff Writer

"The School of Journalism is alive and well. We're in good health and we'll survive," said Murray Fromson, interim director of the school of journalism. He spoke at a forum held yesterday to examine the newly created Annenberg Center for Communications.

When Walter Annenberg donated $120 million to the Annenberg Center for Communications last spring, the new center was designed to encompass the financially troubled school of journalism.

Approximately 35 students attended the forum and asked questions about the accreditation of the journalism department, whether present journalism majors would be able to graduate with journalism degrees, the merger's effect on class requirements and how funds would be distributed.

Fromson could not say how the money would be disbursed. The Annenberg Center is keeping the money in the bank to collect interest until a director is found to administer the funds.

Those departments competing for the monies are Cinema and Television, Engineering and Communications.

Gerald Davison, interim director for the school for communication, said the Annenberg School for Communications is in good position to compete for the funds.

Journalism students were assured by faculty that the strength of the nationally recognized school of journalism would be upheld.

"They wanted to make us a division, but I fought vigorously to keep it a journalism school, and I got full support of the faculty," Fromson said.

Many students left the forum with unanswered questions.

"There wasn't too much information they could offer us at this time and because they couldn't fully answer all of our questions, we didn't know what other questions to ask," said Keri McKenzie, a junior majoring in public relations.

"I wanted to know from a technological standpoint how

Supermarket giants close merger

By David Thun
Staff Writer

Grocery shopping for USC students and community residents is about to change radically following the merger of the Yucaipa companies and Ralphs grocery store chain.

Ownership of several local stores may change hands in the course of the merger, announced Wednesday. The two companies will combine under the Ralphs Grocery Company, according to an article from the Associated Press.

Grocery stores owned by Yucaipa, such as Alpha Beta, Boys Market and Viva, will be converted into Ralphs markets or Food 4 Less warehouses.

Local Yucaipa properties include the Boys Market at 1748 Jefferson Blvd. and the Viva store at 1091 S. Hoover St.

Yucaipa markets under construction, such as the Alpha Beta on Adams and Vermont, will not be significantly affected by the merger, said Jennifer Barrera, assistant project manager with the Community Redevelopment Agency of Los Angeles' Hoover Project Office.

"Maybe the name of the store will change," Barrera said. CRA of LA is negotiating with Food 4 Less to assist in funding the building of new supermarkets.

The new company is planning some closings but also will be opening at least 24 new stores in Southern California, Ralph's chief executive Byron Allumbaugh said in an AP article. The company plans to have 360 locations in Southern California in a year with $5.3 billion in sales annually.

Dr. Alvin Rudisill, associate vice president for civic and community relations, said the merger will be a good thing if it brings more markets into the USC area.

Senate responds to DT, debates issues

Student Senate held its second public meeting of the year last night, addressing both old and new campus issues.

Student Senate

A poem by Senator Brandon Mercer was read aloud by Senator Kari Cutler / Chisholm. The poem criticized recent actions of the College Republicans, Senator Matt Harper, and the Daily Trojan.

"Let me go ahead and address obviously the burning question in everybody's mind, and that is what do I think of what's been in the paper the past few days," Moye remarked. "And my response to that is — that's why we have a press."

"Despite what you read in the paper, we as a senate are progressing," he said. "We're doing more than any other senate, at least in the last five years."

Assemblies working to promote student voting

By Jennifer Hale
Staff Writer

For those who want to register to vote but don't know how, there is a solution on campus.

Project Vote, a non-partisan effort sponsored by the student assemblies, is an active program aimed at registering USC students to vote in Los Angeles.

Project Vote was organized because not enough students are registered to vote at USC, said Sarah Szalavitz, the project's chair.

She and Student Senate Political Affairs chair Kari Cutler / Chisholm started the program to get students, especially those who live in university-owned housing and belong to Greek organizations, involved in the democratic system.

"Students are a strong voting force during elections and their votes do make a difference in the outcome," Szalavitz said. "The 1992 election had the lowest voter turnout in California, which was only about 35 percent of registered voters and 12 percent of the population."

"I have a problem with that because this country is supposed to be a democracy and only a small percentage decided that election," she said.

Szalavitz also said she wants to increase the number of student voters because of the importance of the • LOS ANGELES (AP) — O.J. Simpson's lawyers moved Wednesday to suppress more than 100 items of evidence seized from Simpson's home and cars in five different searches which they claim were illegal.

The defense motion, an amendment to papers filed earlier, listed 112 items of evidence. New items on the inventory from Simpson's bedroom included two sets of gloves and two knit caps.

Another glove, found on a walkway of his home, had been disclosed previously as a key piece of evidence against Simpson. A knit cap was found outside the condominium where Nicole Brown Simpson and Ronald Goldman were found slain on June 12.

Simpson, 47, is charged with the slayings. He has pleaded innocent and is scheduled for trial Sept. 26.

In another development, the defense filed a motion opposing the prosecution's bid to have jurors sequestered throughout the Simpson trial. The papers, however, were filed under seal and court officials said they would not be released.

The prosecution also planned to file an answer to a defense dismissal motion but said it, too, would be sealed because Superior Court Judge Lance Ito indicated he preferred it that way.

• NEW YORK (AP) — An extraordinary baseball season, already shut down by a month-long strike, was canceled Wednesday along with the World Series.

Twenty-six of the 28 clubs agreed to shut down the season in a vote, a management source said. And Montreal Expos president Claude Brochu said in Quebec that the season had been canceled.

• NEW YORK (AP) — Scientists inserted a hyperactive growth gene in salmon that enabled the fish to reach mature size in two years rather than the usual three or four, a difference that could save money for fish farmers.

The fish do not grow unusually large because they die after reaching the normal adult size, said researcher Robert Devlin of Fisheries and Oceans Canada in West Vancouver, British Columbia.

Once the salmon become commercially available in a decade or so, fish farmers could spend less time and food per fish, he said.

He and colleagues reported in Thursday's issue of the journal Nature that they injected coho salmon eggs with a salmon gene for growth hormone, fused to a genetic switch to make it overactive.

A year later, the fish that took up the gene were on average 11 times heavier than normal coho, with one spurting up to 37 times larger.

• WASHINGTON (AP) — President Clinton declared Wednesday the United States has "exhausted every available alternative" short of military invasion to oust Haiti's military rulers. "They're going to leave one way or the other," he warned.

"They do not have to push this to a confrontation," Clinton said in an interview with The Associated Press and other news agencies.

"The United States must not be in a position to walk away from a situation like this in our own back yard," he said.

Clinton's warnings came on the eve of an Oval Office address to build support for his policy, heavily opposed in Congress. Polls show an overwhelming majority of Americans also are opposed to an invasion.

"I am concerned about that and I am sorry that the polls are the way they are," Clinton said. Nevertheless, he said, "I believe it is the right thing to do . . . It is very important for us to resolve this matter."

He said, "I am very angry" that Haiti's military reneged on a promise to leave voluntarily and then persisted in what he said were widespread human rights abuses.

Clinton blamed the military for the deaths of orphans, church people and others and accused them of using rape as a political weapon.

Program Board's new leader

Director faces new challenge with Trojan pride

By Nik Trendowski
Assignment Editor

Florence Tse, this year's Program Board executive director, says she has gone from an introverted freshman from San Francisco to become the leader of a dynamic campus organization.

"It took a little getting used to, but I really like my job now," Tse said.

Tse, who was president of Trojan Pride from March 1993 to April of this year, said her experience with that organization has helped her in advising and working with the Program Board chairs.

During Tse's leadership, Trojan Pride saw its membership increase from five members last September to 75 by the end of the year.

"It was just a great thing to see so many people get involved," Tse said.

As executive director of Program Board, Tse oversees the chairs of the coffeehouse, concerts, discretionary, performing arts, speakers, special events and Trojan Pride committees, as well as the student assemblies.

Some of Tse's goals for Program Board this year include improving cohesion among the directors and planning more large-scale concerts, she said.

"Another goal that I have is increased publicity for Program Board," Tse said. "We need to increase our publicity tenfold because we're a primary source of entertainment on campus."

"We can enrich this campus in ways other organizations are not able to," she said.

Tse said the relationship between Student Senate and Program Board has grown closer this year, and she and senate president Jimmy Moye have been working well together.

Working with Program Board promises benefits for Tse in her career goals and opportunities.

A senior majoring in marketing, she had an internship at Sony Music this summer. Tse hopes to work in marketing with a music label after she graduates.

Tse's involvement in campus organizations has been important in her personal development as well.

"I used to be this really introverted person until I got here," she said. "I made a point of at least trying to get involved in a lot of things."

Despite her prominent position on campus, Tse said she still tries to stay out of the limelight.

Regina Tao / Daily Trojan
Florence Tse

Tse considers USC "the epitome of a perfect college" for her.

"I always knew I wanted to come here," she said. Tse's older brother also attended USC, and she said her series of visits to the university spurred her to apply and enroll.

Academics are important to Tse, who said she hopes to attain a 4.0 grade point average for her senior year after disappointment struck with an A-minus in her freshman physics course.

"Academics is the main reason I'm here," Tse said. "It's a priority, but it's not my life."

Tse will turn 21 next Wednesday, but she said her celebration plans "remain to be seen."

Campus Dems need to raise unheard voice

Now I'm well aware that this fine university is numerically dominated by Republicans. I'm even willing to live with that unfortunate truth, but something must be done by those of us who are not politically conservative so that we are more visible on campus.

Christian Wiseman

It's ludicrous; everywhere I turn I see their sign-up booth, or I hear about one of their upcoming speakers, or I see one of them with their T-shirts. I looked for a Trojan Democrat table all throughout spring semester, only to find more of those zany Republicans with shirts bearing the likeness of one of our nation's most successful profiteers, Rush Limbaugh.

Out of all of the people that I met during my freshman year, only four or five actually claimed to be Democrats. Is there an unwritten rule saying that all Democrats will be promptly lynched if they go public? Is there a warning issued during orientation prohibiting public claims of liberalism? If there was, I missed it.

I want to see liberals more visible on this campus. Sure, the environment is hostile toward us but we need to speak up.

As of a week ago, I was firmly convinced that the reason that I never met very many Democrats was that there just weren't that many to begin with. I've changed my mind. I was sitting in one of my classes a couple of days ago, and the instructor went around the room asking the class for the one factor that they would most identify themselves with.

I was nothing short of shocked when I listened to about three-quarters of the class identify themselves in one way or another as Democrats. I even heard a few people describe themselves as "extremely liberal." I haven't the slightest clue from what rock these people came under, but I just wish I'd have found it earlier. It is also ironic to note that this is an upper-division political science course, so the students are all but exclusively politics majors. I guess the Democrats at this school are too busy playing the game to be sitting around talking about it.

Calls for reparations out of line

Those demanding payments weren't harmed by slavery

One of the lessons that my parents tried to root deep within me is the idea that everything you get, you must earn. We live in a competitive world in which you must work hard to achieve. Some, like Valena Conley of Oakland never learned this simple concept. She feels that the white man owes her.

Matthew O'Gara

According to the July 6 edition of the Los Angeles Times, Conley, a 70-year-old black woman, has filed suit against the federal government, seeking damages for "the enslavement of her ancestors."

And just how much is this enslavement worth? Well, Mrs. Conley thinks that $110 million will just about cover it.

Now I want you to get this straight folks. Conley feels that she is entitled to $110 million in tax money for no reason other than the color of her skin. As a black woman, she feels that she is owed. Owed for the injustices of slavery. Owed for the oppression. Owed for the degradation.

There is a slight problem, however. If Conley is only 70 years old, then slavery had been outlawed for 65 years at the time of her birth. Conley was never bought or sold, never forced to work on a plantation, yet she thinks that society owes her cold hard cash for something that she was never a part of.

"This country got rich off our sweat, and we have never been paid what's due," says Conley. Who exactly is "we," Mrs. Conley?

I have never owned a slave. My family didn't even set foot in this country until 1927, so why do I have to keep hearing how "my people" are responsible for the woes of the black man?

Not surprisingly, legal experts give her little chance, because in order to win the suit she must prove damages — which she cannot because she was never a slave.

Now when most people hear of the suit, they laugh and dismiss it as ridiculous. The frightening thing about this lawsuit is that not only are there several other similar suits that have been filed, but that the reparations cause is gaining followers.

The National Coalition of Blacks for Reparations in America recently celebrated its fifth birthday. The group publishes a newspaper and believes that the problems of poverty, family disintegration and crime among blacks today stem from the terrors of being captured and enslaved.

"There is a sickness among our people, a sickness of the mind that is a residual of our state of bondage," says a representative of the group. Apparently it is a sickness that can only be remedied by asking the white man for money.

your conditions... If a mugger knocks you down, do you wait for the mugger to come and pick you up?"

The reparations movement boils down to nothing more than a group of people looking for a handout. They seek to be paid off for something that they've only read about.

Mrs. Conley states that "slavery is something that still bears on the minds and hearts of our people. It's time to set things right."

Yes, it is time to set things right and finally put the issue to rest. However, the way to do this is not to tell young blacks that they are owed, but rather to let them know that if they want anything out of life they're going to have to earn it — just like the rest of us.

Walter Williams, a black columnist and economics professor at George Mason University perhaps states it best: "Certainly the slave owners owe their slaves reparations. But they're all dead."

I agree that slavery was a fundamental injustice, cruel, brutal and inhumane. I really hate to burst anyone's bubble, but the fact is that I didn't do it. I have never owned a slave. My family didn't even set foot in this country until 1927, so why do I have to keep hearing how "my people" are responsible for the woes of the black man?

Letters

Free thinking endangered by PC guidelines

Warning: This letter may contain offensive, value-laden opinions that represent the nature of the universe without an objective social filter.

The mere suggestion of the existence of "political correctness" continues to rattle my "caveman" cage as I read yet another chapter of "My opinion is objective," by Christian Ewell.

For fear of being called politically incorrect or of not conforming to the prevailing kinder, gentler tone, we are in danger of raising another generation of people that just doesn't get it!

The pretense of Nazis calling themselves liberals and supporting codification and standardization of propriety in the arenas of art and interpersonal communication is proof that the true laws of intellectual growth are at work.

The Haegelian Dialectic — thesis, antithesis, synthesis — is a necessity for truth and freedom. "In the beginning is the word," and attempts to pressure people to keep their opinions to themselves or to alter them is at the heart of an Orwellian nightmare. And, in case Mr. Ewell fails to understand the source of his rights to say what he says, the basis of our society is freedom.

Liberal means free! And a liberal is a free thinker, caveman or not. And speaking one's mind must be encouraged in this ever-conforming apathetic society.

Daily newspapers, once thought to be the last bastion of the marketplace of ideas are dying in small towns at an alarming rate. These papers are being replaced by national media that prints and televises shocking, exceptional events, leaving Americans anesthetized, but worse, believing these exceptions represent reality.

The backlash of small-minded liberals, not to be confused with those of us that continue to be freethinkers, is their own form of censorship. The commonality of right and left political idealism becomes the temptation to standardize. The result is highlighted by movie executives creating films that not only have nothing to say, but have characters who say nothing to stimulate conflict.

The basis of good art is conflict. When opposite energies fail to reverberate, we die. I was at a marketing screening of Quentin Tarantino's

"Reservoir Dogs" in New York, at which a young woman asked him, after its screening, "Why did you choose to have the characters commit such violence and express racial and sexual hate?"

His answer was simply "Because that's the way they are."

We intellectuals, artists, politicians and... journalists have got to get off our arrogant stoops and say what is, not what we would like to be. This truth is far more impactful on positive change than the pretense of objectivity.

Or maybe, we should have Mr. Ewell give us greater details on his guidelines for political correctness so we may all move forward in blind, comfortable lock-step. Not!

I'm not going to try to kid myself; the University of Southern California has been, is and probably always will be a great bastion of conservatism in the typically liberal higher education system of this nation. That doesn't mean, though, that Democrats must be silent. For the first time in ages, we've got the White House and Congress simultaneously. Granted, our president isn't peaking in the public opinion polls, but as Democrats, we must take the bad with the good.

I know that there are a lot of Democrats on this campus. I also know that they can't all be in my poli-sci class. If they are, I stand corrected and you can ignore all of this. I don't think this is the case, though.

Therefore, I have a proposal for every Democrat at this school. Find the Trojan Democrat booth by Tommy Trojan, and become a member. It will take you but two minutes, and you will be helping to raise a voice that hasn't been heard here at USC.

I would like to see speakers sponsored by Trojan Democrats. I want to see the T-shirts and I want to see liberals more visible on this campus. Sure, the environment is hostile toward us, but at a school where even the newspaper is conservative, we need to speak up.

Be proud to be a Democrat, and let the conservatives talk about how right they are. They can be right all day, but that certainly doesn't mean they're correct.

Payback: Reparations derided as way to escape responsibility

The bottom line here is that I'm tired of hearing it. I'm tired of hearing that a portion of my paycheck should go toward paying someone for something that I didn't do and that they never suffered through. I'm tired of being told that for no reason other than the color of my skin that I owe someone something. I don't owe anyone anything because I haven't done anything to harm them.

I'm having a hard enough time trying to make my own financial ends meet, not to mention all the stress involved with graduate school. No one puts money into my bank account because I'm white, so don't ask me to give you money because you're not.

My education has me up to my ears in debt, and the fact is that I'm excluded from more financial aid than I am eligible for simply because I'm white. (This, of course, is done in the name of "fairness.") The message that I'm sent is that I should feel guilty for being born white. I'm telling you now that I don't.

Finally, it seems to me that those who want most to live in a colorblind society are the ones who are always pointing to the color of their skin. The best advice I can give to someone like this is that the white guy sitting next to you in class is having just as hard a time in life as you are. If you don't want him to judge you by your appearance, then don't judge him by his.

PRINCIPLES of SOUND RETIREMENT INVESTING

UNFORTUNATELY, THIS IS WHERE PEOPLE ARE PUTTING TOO MANY RETIREMENT DOLLARS.

Every year, a lot of people make a huge mistake on their taxes. They don't take advantage of tax deferral and wind up sending Uncle Sam money they could be saving for retirement.

Fortunately, that's a mistake you can easily avoid with TIAA-CREF SRAs. SRAs not only ease your current tax bite, they offer a remarkably easy way to build retirement income—especially for the "extras" that your regular pension and Social Security benefits may not cover. Because your contributions are made in before-tax dollars, you pay less taxes now. And since all earnings on your SRA are tax-deferred as well, the money you don't send to Washington works even harder for you. Down the road, that can make a dramatic difference in your quality of life.

What else makes SRAs so special? A range of allocation choices—from the guaranteed security of TIAA to the diversified investment accounts of CREF's variable annuity—all backed by the nation's number one retirement system.

Why write off the chance for a more rewarding retirement? Call today and learn more about how TIAA-CREF SRAs can help you enjoy many happy returns.

Benefit now from tax deferral. Call our SRA hotline 1 800-842-2733, ext. 8016.

Ensuring the future
for those who shape it.™

CREF certificates are distributed by TIAA-CREF Individual and Institutional Services. For more complete information, including charges and expenses, call 1 800-842-2733, ext. 8016 for a prospectus. Read the prospectus carefully before you invest or send money.

Life's meaning & other sheer trivia

Disconnectivity and an increasingly-fragmented internal world are proud to bring you the whirling shreds of what passes for a working human mind. Properly assembled, the component sentences of the following column recombine to form:

- a) The Lorenz equation;
- b) The collected works of Thomas Mann;
- c) Three days of nourishment for an underfed Third World child. Sally Struthers, eat your heart out (no pun intended).

"You were kicked by a great man, Stubb, and with a beautiful ivory leg. It's an honor; I consider it an honor." You'd almost think Herman Melville went to USC, where it's a privilege to get reamed so long as a Prestigious University is doing the honors. I resent having to bend over and smile several times a week, especially when I'm paying $25K a year for the favor.

At the same time, I'm disgusted by the attitude that "I'm paying however damn much to go to this school, therefore you should kiss my ass," which is a more accurate expression of USC school spirit than anything I've ever heard. Translated into Latin, it should appear on the university seal.

I'm not in favor of truth in advertising. It insults the intelligence of the consumer. Anyone with half a brain knows that cigarettes are bad for you, good food is fattening, and drinking beer will not get you women — not any sort of women you'd want while sober, anyway. When I'm buying a product, I'm buying a lie. Buy enough of the same kind of lie and you've got yourself a lifestyle.

Moral purity is impossible. This is why I'm deliberately amoral. Complete amorality is impossible. This is because I was brought up Catholic, a religion whose motto (translated from the Latin) is "Get 'em while they're young." Getting 'em while they're young is impossible. This is why Joey Buttafuoco is news.

Suicide is the most sincere form of self-criticism.

Movie of the Week: "Killing Thyme." Julia Child, Jeff Smith, and Yan Can Cook team up in a rollicking tale of murder, mayhem, and mostaccoli.

Julia portrays the spicy seductress who comes between the hard-boiled Frugal Gourmet and his partner Yan. Romance simmers as the saucy trio dish up the mystery in this, their network television premiere! I like it, J.B., and I think the kids will like it too.

The future doesn't frighten me as much as the present. However pathetic my prospects, there's always the potential for a miracle. There is no legal way to disguise the anguish of the present. This is why people drop more cash on the lottery than they do on drugs.

Diversions

Smithereens songwriter / lead vocalist Pat DiNizio (far left) can write great singles, but still can't build a solid album around them.

The Smithereens
A Date with the Smithereens
(RCA)

With music reminiscent of

'60s rock 'n' roll (back when that phrase wasn't an overused cliché but an actual style and feel of popular music), the Smithereens quietly have made some outstanding singles over the last few years, such as "A Girl Like You" and "Too Much Passion." Unfortunately, they often share with their muses an inability to make albums that go beyond thesimple hits-and-filler formula. Blowup and 11 both had equally stellar moments and yawning doldrums.

A Date with the Smithereens does little to break from that trend. For every great tune like "Can't Go Home Anymore," songwriter / lead vocalist Pat DiNizio wastes our time with trifles like "Gotti," a lukewarm stab at social commentary.

"Miles from Nowhere" compares with the best of the band's work, while "Sick of Seattle" (a weak dis on the Northwest's musical hotbed) comes off as sour grapes. It's as if DiNizio resents those young rascals for being able to grab success when he hasn't been so fortunate.

While the Smithereens undoubtedly have their creative sights set on the Beatles and other popular rock bands of long ago, they share a certain kinship with Stone Temple Pilots. Like those critical pariahs, the 'Reens have yet to let go of a crippling infatuation with their influences. Until they do, DiNi-

So what comes after graduation, big guy?

"So, have you thought about what you want to do with your life?" is a popular question asked of me these days. These kinds of things happen to people who get degrees. But every time graduation comes up, so does that inevitable question.

That's not to say I haven't given it much consideration. I know what I want to do with the rest of my life. But what I am going to do for 40 hours a week, fifty weeks a year, is a different subject. Unsure of this I decided that I should seek professional guidance. Maybe a trip to a vocational specialist (or headhunter) would help.

"So, have you thought about what you want to do with your life?" Again the question. "I'd like to eventually settle down, have a family, a condo in lower Manhattan..." It dawns on me that this isn't what she wants to know. She wants to know what I plan to do about that four letter word. W-K.

Having answered this question over a thousand times in one weekend to nosy relatives, I fall back on my favorite answer. "I am hoping to find a profession that has a potential for growth." She smiles and nods. Everyone does upon hearing that statement. Thank God no one has asked me to explain it.

"I see you are well educated," as she scans my paperwork. But then that look comes over her face that says "how did you ever plan to make money with a music degree?" Her faith in her ability to place anyone is wavering. "Besides music, what other interest do you have?"

"I like travel, fine dining, bar hopping..." "Would you like to work in an office?" That sounds good. I'd love to have an office. It could be my daytime hangout. All I need is a small staff of personal assistants, a wet bar, three phone lines, a company car, a fax machine, espresso maker and an expense account.

Too much time on my hands...

by Richard Osuna

Wait a minute, she expects me to manage the place. If I have to spend all my time taking care of a boss' business, I'll have no time left for my own.

"Would you like to fix things?" Hmmm. "Do you mean like what that MacGyver guy used to do on television?" No such luck. "How about what the mob does to boxing matches?" She means repairs. I don't think so.

"What about computers?" When they don't know what to do with you, they give you computers. "How about programming?" No way. The Mcjob of Geekdom. Translated into binary code, it's a zero.

At this point, she starts to realize that maybe I can't be helped. "You like to be creative, don't you?" That's why I studied music. "Can you think of a job where you could be creative?" Well, since Keith Richards is probably one of the undead, I don't see his place in the Stones ever opening. "I want a job like Byron's." "What type of work does your friend do?" I mean Lord Byron. He had the coolest job. He hung out with lots of intelligent people, married a talented lady, traveled around and wrote some cool poetry. He never worked with animals, didn't have to kiss ass and always had cash handy. Sign me up.

"How about Desk Top Publishing, it's creative and uses computers." Not exactly Lord Byrons job (nowhere near as romantic, and back to the computers again), but as I think of it, the possibilities are endless. I think she is on to something. Something big.

I could create my own 'zine. A forum for the unheard as well as those with nothing to say. It could be a cross between my very own on-ramp to the information highway and a soap box. I'll call it the Instigator. Nothing will be sacred. Institutions will tremble. Social order will be in upheaval. I'll have a job!

"You liked school, didn't you?" Sure I did. I studied a little, worked a little and hung out a lot. Have you thought about grad school?" Yeah, but they will eventually grant me a degree, and I will leave myself open to that stupid question again.

Monty Python: Lust for Glory

Idle, Jones, others give talks as part of comedy festival

By Rachel Balko
Theatre Editor

"Monty Python: Lust for Glory" ended Tuesday night after five glorious days. The American Cinematheque presented a retrospective of this legendary comedy group's work in celebration of its 25th anniversary.

Monty Python Retrospective

I, having loved the Pythons in a truly deep and spiritual way for years, simply had to attend. For those of you who couldn't be there, I hereby present the First Annual Lust for Glory Awards.

The "How Not To Be Seen" Award. Michael Palin and John Cleese tie for this one as neither of them bothered to show up. But both sent their regrets by way of program notes.

Palin informed us that his "fleshy bits (were) nailed to a chair in London" to finish his novel, but he did encourage us all to "have a good time. As we did all those years ago."

Cleese claimed he wasn't there "because Los Angeles is such a dump." He also pointed out that it would have been "more Pythonic" to celebrate their 27th anniversary. This certainly is true. Both Palin and Cleese were sorely missed.

The "If You Feel Guilty About It Afterwards, We Can Dig a Grave and You Can Throw Up Into It" Award. David Sherlock, the late Graham Chapman's lover of many years, receives this one hands down. As part of the discussion after "Life of Brian," he assured us that "Graham would have loved to be here. And I've done my best to bring him here with me."

As we all applauded, touched by Sherlock's sentimentality, he produced a small plastic bag filled with gray dust from his pocket. "Here he is," Sherlock stated simply. He then took a handful of ashes and threw them at us.

Sherlock explained that, "being the arbiter of good taste that Graham was, I'm sure he would have appreciated that." The room immediately burst into laughter and applause.

Rest in pieces, Graham.

The "Part VI: Death" Award. A sad one this is. Terry Jones had to return to England on Saturday morning after he found out his brother Nigel suddenly died. Nigel encouraged Jones to write historical comedy back in the late '60s. This encouragement eventually led to the idea for "Monty Python and the Holy Grail."

All Python fans owe a great debt to Nigel Jones. As a huge "Grail" fan myself, I send my sympathy to Terry Jones and his family.

The "I Swear to Tell the Truth and Nothing But the Truth, So Anyway..." Award. Terry Gilliam, the Lone American, gets this baby for the dirt he dished out about the absent John Cleese.

According to Gilliam, back in the "Flying Circus" days, Cleese owned a Siamese cat which he absolutely adored. However, the cat sprayed too much, so Cleese had "his balls cut off."

"Then the cat started scratching the furniture," Gilliam recalled. "So John had his claws ripped out." But then the cat howled all the time which was very annoying. So "John had his vocal chords cut," which left the cat capable of only a hiss.

(See Python, page 9)

John Cleese went on to write for and star in "Fawlty Towers" after he left "Monty Python's Flying Circus." Both were hugely popular.

Wiegman

I was a nightclub singer in the 1940's. I wore white satin and swung. My suitors were a soldier, an editor, and a professional assassin. People drank hard and smoked heavily.

I am a computer operator in the 1990's. I wear old t-shirts and slam. My last suitor was a taxi driver who offered me Indian food and a free cab ride. I drink hard and smoke heavily. Past-life regression is a crock, but you can't blame a girl for trying.

People are like fractals: infinite distance within finite boundaries. It's why we never communicate.

If I had a business card, it would read, "K.T. Wiegman. Manager of Online Services." It should read, "K.T. Wiegman. Deconstruction Foreman." "K.T. Wiegman. Tastes Just Like Chicken." "K.T. Wiegman. Satisfaction Guaranteed or Your Money Back."

Jack Kerouac knew how to live ecstatically. I have two friends who jumped into the ocean last Friday at three a.m. I never imagined I could feel so much admiration for two naked men drenched in salt water.

As far as I can tell, the only way to have a life is to live it firsthand.

Small Ball Paul
You In Flames
(Thirsty Ear)

You never hear of many spectacular bands that originate in St. Louis, Mo., and there is a good reason why. St. Louis breeds mediocrity. Case in point, Small Ball Paul and its debut album You In Flames.

Supposedly the band is well received in St. Louis. Well, maybe that's because they really don't have that many other hardcore / alternative bands there and the residents take what they can get.

Whatever the reason may be, Small Ball Paul is boring. The band's songs lack any interesting hooks after the first 20 seconds. Once the lyrics begin, an overwhelming desire for sleep soon follows. The only flawless thing on this album is Holly Roberts' cover art, which is extremely misleading as to the quality of the product inside.

With more interesting production, catchy choruses, and some life experience outside of St. Louis (it worked for William S. Burroughs, didn't it?), Small Ball Paul could be an alright band. Until then, don't count on St. Louis to be the next big music center. C-

Python: Six comedians equal five days of laughs

Gilliam said that Cleese now denies this incident ever happening but the American insists it is true. So it all comes down to Terry's word versus John's since the cat, unfortunately, has been unable to speak on his owner's behalf.

The "Deja Vu, That Strange Feeling . . . Deja Vu, That Strange Feeling . . ." Award. Eric Idle gets this one, not so much for what he did as for how he looked. I had the good fortune to sit near the great man and speak with him.

The guy must be hanging out with Dick Clark because he has not aged. He looked just like he did during the Crucifixion scene in "Life of Brian." I expected him to burst into "Always Look on the Bright Side of Life" at any moment. Unfortunately, he did not.

There was much more, of course, but I've run out of room. "Lust for Glory" was a once-in-a-lifetime experience and I consider it essential to my further spiritual enlightenment that I attended.

Incidentally, please join my letter-writing campaign to throw a 27th anniversary gala and to get John Cleese to attend. That'll teach him to challenge a Python fan.

VAN DAMME

THEY KILLED
 HIS WIFE
 TEN YEARS AGO.

THERE'S STILL TIME TO SAVE HER.

TIMECOP

MURDER IS FOREVER...
 UNTIL NOW.

OPENS FRIDAY SEPTEMBER 16TH
 AT A THEATRE NEAR YOU.

Is Jean-Claude Van Damme the '90s action hero?

Actors like Stallone may be better known, but recent films have made Van Damme a hit

By John Black
 Staff Writer

As any serious movie buff should know by now, this summer's crop of movies left much to be desired in the ways of action and entertainment. From dismal failures such as "Beverly Hills Cop III," to losers like "The Next Karate Kid," this summer continually proved itself to be a letdown. All of that is going to change this Friday. That's the day that "Timecop" comes out.

Starring Jean-Claude Van Damme, "Timecop" is a futuristic thriller in which Van Damme must chase a ruthless killer who is hell-bent on becoming the president. The twist is that in the future, time travel has become a reality, and Van Damme will have to use every bit of skill and determination he can muster to defeat his nemesis, who is played by Ron Silver.

Alas, "Timecop" doesn't come out until Friday, but fret not, oh fans, I've come up with a collection of the all-time best Van Damme films for you to run through those VCRs until the appointed day rolls around. If you've already seen some of his films, then you know you'll be in for a treat, and if you haven't... you'll be in for a surprise!

• "Bloodsport" (1987) This is the quintessential Van Damme flick. In his first movie, loosely based on a true story, Van Damme stars as army officer Frank Dux, who goes AWOL to Hong Kong to participate in the Kumite, a battle to the death. Before he can take on the titleholder Chong-Li (Bolo Yeung), Dux has to face an assortment of baddies, not to mention dodge two military policemen who chase him to Hong Kong.

It has proven to be a pivotal movie in the actor's career, not only because it was his first film, but also because it was in "Bloodsport" that his ability to do the splits was first brought to our attention. Additionally, this is the movie that first displayed what has since become Van Damme's patented in-the-air spin kick. Look for Yeung in "Double Impact" as well.

• "Cyborg" (1989) In the 23rd century, America has become the victim of a nuclear war and is subsequently hit by a seemingly incurable plague. Additionally, there's a horde of pirates running around who want to kill everyone. Van Damme's role in all of this? The movieposter said it all: "He's the first hero of the 23rd century."

• "Double Impact" (1991) Between "Cyborg" and this one, Van Damme beat the crap out of a human gorilla in "Lionheart," and incinerated the Sandman in Jean-Claude Van Damme has thrilled audiences with his martial arts skills and an uncanny ability to be an realistic, exciting action hero.

"Death Warrant." Who else was left to challenge him besides himself? Yes, fight fans, it's true. Van Damme fights Van Damme a la Jackie Chan in "Twin Dragons."

In twin roles, he plays Chad and Alex, two brothers who were separated shortly after birth when their parents were brutally butchered. Now on a mission of revenge to reclaim a bridge whose revenue is rightfully theirs, they must first learn to live with each other. An unbelievably good popcorn-muncher, which Van Damme also co-produced and co-scripted.

• "Universal Soldier" (1992) Van Damme plays an American soldier in Vietnam who is killed by a sadistic sergeant (Dolph Lundgren). The two are placed in cryogenics and revived 20 years later as Unisols (short for universal soldiers), mindless beings with superhuman powers.

Things go haywire when they regain their memories and the Unisols go head to head. A bit of a disappointment in that Lundgren also holds a black belt in martial arts (for a display of his fighting prowess, check out "Showdown in Little Tokyo" with Brandon Lee), yet he never demonstrates any of it. But look for a cameo by Tiny Lister, the steroid-filled maniac who took on Hulk Hogan in "No Holds Barred."

• "Hard Target" (1993) Van Damme played Chance Boudreaux in this, his most recent film, which was directed by internationally acclaimed Hong Kong director John Woo. Loosely based on the short story "The Most Dangerous Game," Boudreaux discovers that there is a syndicate in town which provides wealthy wimps with human prey so they can prove their manliness. Chance then proceeds to take the syndicate down.

Not great, but the scene in which Chance shoots a gun at a truck while standing (yes, standing) on a moving motorcycle is the movie's high point.

And that brings us up to date, folks. For even more Van Damme excitement, check out "Black Eagle," "Kickboxer," "Death Warrant," "Nowhere to Run," and "Lionheart." Then make sure to get in line for "Timecop," which is going to be the movie of the fall.

And if the going is getting pretty tough for him, and it doesn't look like he'll make it, just remember what the movie poster says: "They killed his wife ten years ago, he still has time to save her." It's on.

The actor has thrilled audiences with his roles in "Bloodsport," "Lionheart," "Cyborg," "Double Impact," and "Universal Soldier."

The bitching is back this fall

'Melrose Place':
 New plot twists
 to old scandals

By Gregg Moppert
 TV Editor

Summer's officially over now that the new season of "Melrose Place" has begun. For the few of you who didn't get to watch the season premiere, there are some new plot twists and characters.

TV Review

First off, Jake decides to "clean house" and he starts with Amanda. While out on his boat, he rescues a mysterious lady (Carol Alt) who helps out by letting her stay on his boat for a few days.

In San Francisco, Allison and her sister discuss the abuse inflicted upon them as children. Later, their father breaks into the house and confronts Allison. However, Billy arrives, saves the sisters and the father gets away. Michael is in a coma in the hospital. When he wakes up he can't remember anything, except that he's a doctor.

Jane is still in jail. When Sydney comes to visit her, Jane tells her sister that she thinks she attacked Michael. Sydney goes to see Kimberly, because the redhead doesn't have an alibi and Kimberly decides to help her.

Then Sydney runs into the police, to whom she tells her new alibi. Later that day, Sydney overhears Kimberly telling the police of her whereabouts.

Kimberly then breaks into Sydney's apartment and places incriminating evidence in her dresser, which the police find the next day. Later, Sydney is arrested before she can leave town.

Billy is ready to marry Allison in Las Vegas. But Allison tells him she can't go because she has to deal with her abusive past experiences. Billy gets mad and drives off without her.

Here's the scoop for this season: Jo will have her baby; Sydney won't be convicted for attempted murder and Jake, Amanda and this new mystery woman will be the new love triangle. Allison will put her abusive father in his place and marry Billy; Matt will get back together with his Navy man and Kimberly will finally get what she deserves. All these changes should make for an interesting fall on "Melrose Place."

Merger: Effect on community unknown

"The bottom line for us in this university neighborhood is that the community feels it needs more supermarkets," Rudisill said. "If that's a possibility, it's welcome."

Maudine Clark, program director of Parents for Watts, said Yucaipa and its subsidiary, Food 4 Less, have contributed to her organization for approximately eight years. She praised their efforts and charitable work in the South Central Los Angeles area.

"Food 4 Less has been wonderful," Clark said. "They've sponsored youth programs and Magic Mountain trips, provided food and sponsored our shelter."

Clark also praised Food 4 Less' development of markets in the South Central area after the 1991 riots.

"I feel appreciative to them for opening doors when others would not come in," she said.

The state attorney general's office and the Federal Trade Commission now will begin investigating the agreement to see if it violates anti-trust laws.

Standard procedure re-

Regina Tao / Daily Trojan

The 1995 opening of this Alpha Beta supermarket site, located at Adams and Vermont, should not be affected by the merger.

quires a merger to be analyzed to determine the revenues and market shares the company controls, how difficult it is for competitors to gain access to the area and the access local consumers have to competition, sources in the Attorney General's office said.

Sources from Ralphs and Food 4 Less, which manages Yucaipa's markets in the Southland, said that the merger will not violate antitrust laws, because of increasing competition among Southern California markets, according an article in the Tuesday Los Angeles Times.

Clark said as long as Yucaipa and Food 4 Less continue their support of community programs she has no problem with the idea of a merger.

"As long as they help the people, fine," she said. "I say, God bless them."

Vote

upcoming election.

Project Vote also urges students who currently are registered to participate in the election because every vote is important.

"It's no good to register to vote and not vote," Cutler / Chisholm said.

Project Vote members have fanned across campus in the hopes of registering 3,000 voters by October 11, the deadline for voters to register.

"It's important that students take the time to vote and think about what they vote for in the democratic process," said Donn Christensen, director of the Academic Honors Assembly.

The sponsoring assemblies will be busy distributing and collecting registration cards until October 11.

Cutler / Chisholm said resident advisers have the responsibility of registering all students on their floors and increasing student interest in voting.

"I think Project Vote is a great way to acquaint residents with the political process because it's the first step in having a voice in politics," said Brandon Mercer, a resident adviser in Pardee Tower.

The resident advisers have received a lot of response from their floors, Cutler / Chisholm said.

Project Vote also will be encouraging voter registration during one of the Monday night dinners at the Greek houses.

"Freshmen are the focus of this program since they are new and not likely to be registered in the Los Angeles area," Cutler / Chisholm said. "The only requirement to register is to be at least 18 years old by Tuesday, November 8, Election Day."

"If a student is registered in another state or California county, they can register in Los Angeles as long as they only vote once for the same election," Szalavitz said.

Anyone interested in Project Vote can call Szalavitz or Cutler / Chisholm at (213) 740-5620.

Senate

Imaad Zuberi, security affairs chair, announced a broadened scope for senate's complaint forms, which were previously limited to complaints concerning the Department of Public Safety.

Zuberi, Student Affairs Chair Radha Thompson, and senate president Jimmy Moye met with the heads of the major university services earlier yesterday to discuss the changes.

"Now the forms encompass housing, telephone services, transportation, trams, parking, escort, maintenance, the bookstore, and dining services," Zuberi said.

He hopes to eventually expand the forms, available in the senate office, to include financial aid and other areas.

James Emerson, residence hall senator, announced plans to acquire a table to be used for the Tommy Trojan Forum. A borrowed table will be used for next Monday's tentative kickoff.

Emerson also announced the progress of a proposal to place change machines in every residence hall and two off-campus housing facilities.

Recruitment chair Jennifer Canillas asked that one senator from each constituency oversee the "The Students of USC Demand..." petition outlining the changes senate hopes to implement at the university.

The petition is still circulating, and Moye hopes to collect 2,000 signatures before presenting it

HOT ON THE TRAIL OF THE COST CUTTING COLOR PRINTER.

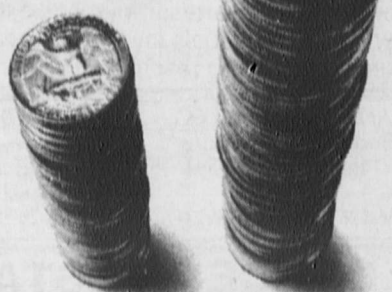

I just cleared up "The Case Of The Vanishing Ink," and was cleaning off my desk when it hit me like a ream of paper: even my most brilliant work looked dull.

The reason? Everything was in black and white. So I said to myself, "Mr. Print Detective, you need a color printer." I made a phone call and received a tip from one of my sources at 1-800-848-4123, "The Canon® BJC-600 is a sure thing for color."

It sounded good, but I had to investigate. After all, I am Nick Canon, Print Detective.

Now, there are a lot gray areas in color printers. Like cost-per-page, color quality and speed. So I made a bee-line to the lab to have a little chat with my pal, Specs. I knew he knew what I needed to know.

"The facts prove the BJC-600 costs about half as much to operate as most other color ink jet printers."
-NICK

His desk looked like a bomb had gone off. There were printer parts everywhere. "Specs, you ever seen a Canon BJC-600?"

He peered up through his specs, "You're looking at one right now." I was in luck. He had just examined a BJC-600 from ink to nozzles.

"What's it all mean?," I asked. Specs quoted The Hard Copy Observer verbatim, "No matter how you slice it, the BJC-600 costs about half as much to operate as most other ink jet printers." "How can that be?" I questioned.

"Elementary. There's a separate ink cartridge for each color, so you don't have to go and spend a fortune replacing all the other colors when one runs out." I "Put a clock to the BJC-600. You'll find it's fast."

-NICK

was intrigued. He went on. "It's also optimized for printing brilliant color on low-cost plain paper." "But I thought I had to fork out all my dough on special coated paper," I exclaimed.

"Not with the BJC-600," he replied "I see," I said. He said I hadn't seen anything yet, and showed me a print sample. The color was more than swell. It was killer.

"What about speed?" I inquired. "It's fast" he fired back. He slowly explained, "You see the BJC-600 has three times as many nozzles as its nearset competitor."

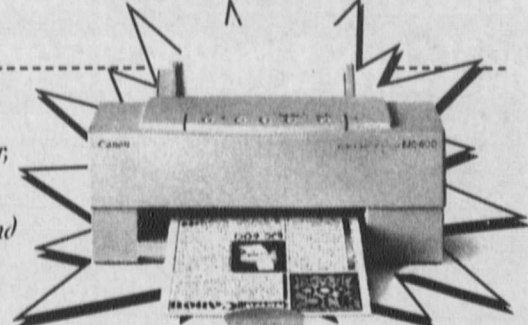

It was heady stuff, but I knew what it all meant.

I had finally found a color printer that was head and shoulders above the rest, and wouldn't cost an arm and leg to own.

Well, I guess you could say that "Before you buy a printer, it pays and saves to investigate."

that would affect the availability of resources for us as students," said Daria Winter, a junior majoring in broadcast journalism.

"The new Annenberg merger can be very good providing our colleagues in Annenberg, and the university beyond, understand the unique role of journalism in a democracy and the mission of the Journalism school to prepare students to meet their responsibility," said journalism professor Ed Cray.

"They (journalism students and faculty) don't have anything to worry about," Davison said. "Their needs and interests are going to get greater attention in the new Annenberg School."

to the Board of Trustees on Wednesday.

In an issue tabled last week, the Student Leaders Conference requested $500 or less for food and photocopies. The senate unanimously approved on the condition that the University Residential Student Community match the contribution.

New business included a speech from Jeff Thompson of the Board of Trustees, detailing improvements in the university, particularly the rising endowment and academic quality.

"We need to foster a new attitude. . . If we leave here thinking we went to a great school, we'll give more back and improve the endowment," said Radha Thompson.

The funding for joining the National Coalition for Student Empowerment, a group founded by student government members of the Universities of Connecticut and Arizona and Northern Arizona University was approved. The organization serves as a lobbying group, particularly in financial aid issues, and as a national database of student governments.

Finally, a resolution was passed concerning whether to buy shirts bearing a Student Senate / Program Board emblem, for all senators and Program Board directors. The details will be worked out later.

The Penalty Box

By Joe E. Schlosser

When will J.J. Stokes, who injured a hamstring and missed UCLA's last game against SMU, be back for the Bruins? . . .

Better yet, when will Rob Johnson, Heisman Trophy candidate, come back for the Trojans? . . .

Hopefully, Adam Abrams, a freshman placekicker and brother of Stanford placekicker Eric Abrams, will fare a little better than his elder brother if he is put into a situation to kick the game-winning field goal . . .

Saturday, Eric missed a chip shot against Northwestern that would have won it for the Cardinal. The game ended in a 41-41 black eye for the Pacific 10 Conference . . .

It figures Curtis Conway would start his season in prime time . . .

Conway, who hasn't exactly taken the NFL by storm, scored two touchdowns (one on an 85-yard reception) and a two-point conversion Monday, as he almost single-handedly brought his Chicago Bears team back from the dead . . .

I thought Prime Ticket only played USC football games the day after, so all of us who missed the game could get a chance to watch it . . .

Now it seems that the reason many people will initially miss the USC-Baylor game will be because of the cable network, who had the university change the time of the game from 12:30 p.m. to 7 p.m. for monetary reasons . . .

Ever sat in the Sun Deck at the Coliseum? . . .

Some say it's too sunny or maybe it's too low. Or how about, you're sitting behind all the action? . . .

Well, the USC Athletic Department's marketing people have come up with a few ideas to spruce up attendance in that natural tanning booth . . .

To those of you who choose to plant yourself there during Trojan football games, there will be free giveaways . . .

Lucky fans will have opportunities to win airline tickets on Southwest Airlines, bottled water, sunglasses and, most importantly, suntan lotion . . .

Coming this May to an arena near you, USC Hall of Fame II . . .

The inaugural event, which took place at the Great Western Forum last spring, was a huge success, according to officials in the athletic department . . .

During halftime of the USC-Notre Dame football game, the first batch of inductees, which includes the likes of O.J. Simpson, Mike Garrett, Fred Lynn and John McKay, among others, will be introduced . . .

Did you catch women's basketball coach Cheryl Miller on the Fox sitcom "Living Single" last week? . . .

Miller, who has done her share of television, looked right at home in her role as Queen Latifah's high school basketball rival . . .

"I enjoyed doing it," Miller said. "The only problem was that it was so time consuming." . . .

Latifah, who plays a magazine editor on the show, wrote a negative article about Miller's character, a coach from the East Coast. After some jawing, a one-on-one basketball game between the two was set up . . .

"I took it out on her on the court," Miller said. "I beat her technically, but she beat me spiritually. It was an emotional victory for her, since she scored a point off me." . . .

Nicky McCrimmon, who played for Miller's USC squad a year ago, is a real-life basketball rival of the famed rapper-turned-actress . . .

McCrimmon, who has three classes left before she can graduate, used to play against Latifah in New York City parks . . .

"I thought coach did a pretty good job, considering it was her first time acting," McCrimmon said. "Acting is not easy, you know." . . .

How did Miller's new assistant coach, Brooke Meadows, feel about her boss' acting debut? . . .

"She took on her own personality on the show. She was really good," Meadows said. "She's just a very passionate person. She does everything 100 percent, whether it's playing, coaching or acting." . . .

Now that Miller has broken into the "business," what would she like to do next? . . .

"My ideal role would be on either 'Seinfeld' or 'Frasier,'" Miller said. "I really want to have a love scene with Frasier."

Water polo match axed

By Marisol Alanis
Staff Writer

The scheduled men's water polo match between USC and Pepperdine at Malibu tomorrow has been cancelled due to lack of officials.

"There are only so many qualified collegiate officials in Southern California," USC Coach John Williams said. "We can't have high school officials, they couldn't control the game."

"The guys would be fouling each other all over the place."

The team (3-2 overall, 1-0 in the Mountain Pacific Sports Federation) waits until a week from Saturday to play again, when the Trojans host UCLA.

Horne: Football's TV rules, baseball's leaders horrible the ball popped loose. It rolled into the end zone, where it was recovered by the Wildcats. An official signaled Northwestern ball.

But wait! After conferring for a few minutes, the officials signaled touchdown. Nevermind the fact that the ball was in the end zone long before Mitchell got there.

If that's how it's going to be, I'm not looking forward to Oct. 15 in Palo Alto.

But then again, the officials may have helped Stanford's offense, but they could do nothing for the Cardinal's god-awful defense. Forty-one points to Northwestern?

Officials or not, maybe I am looking forward to Oct. 15 in Palo Alto . . .

Had I been in Los Angeles on Sunday morning, I would have loved to have watched Joe Montana-Steve Young I on television.

It was the most intriguing matchup for the NFL in years, but Fox dropped the ball.

The Southland saw the Los Angeles Rams-Atlanta Falcons game, football at its finest. Basically, because the Rams are the home team, that game must be shown.

And fans of good football lose out.

But that's not the only way that television ruins things.

In other parts of the country, where there is no home team, viewers are able to watch doubleheaders on both Fox and NBC. Here, because of the Raiders and Rams, we're stuck with watching one game in each time slot so there's no competition.

Back in the days when I lived in a town without a true home team, I could flip channels and choose which game I wanted to watch. Without a choice, I'm more often than not stuck with a game I don't want to see. That makes it quite difficult for me to be a diehard NFL fan, or any kind of fan.

There is one solution. Since no one at the NFL will get smart anytime soon, we can only hope that the Rams and Raiders move, and quickly, allowing both networks to show their doubleheaders . . .

And finally, I'd like to make a promise here in print, so all my readers can help me keep this pledge: No baseball games in 1995.

The greed has ruined it for me. It's my favorite sport, but morons control the game.

Let it go on, but it goes on without me. You won't see me in any professional ballpark next season.

Perhaps I'll reevaluate my decision in 1996, but not until then.

If you cared about the game, you'd do the same.

aging. They work hard and have incredible chemistry. The talent is here to get to the top."

Baumgartner also mentioned that this year's squad had the best qualifying scores of any team in USC history, even better than last year's squad that finished second to Arizona State and had four All-Americans and the individual Pac-10 champion.

Tee for two was nice, but Baumgartner likes the idea of even improving upon that.

New coach, new era, no problem.

The Trojans swing into the 1995 golf season thinking big with a possible Pac-10 title and, perhaps, an NCAA championship, well within range.

"All the ingredients are here," said new head coach Kurt Schuette, "but we need to improve our overall talent level."

"We will get better over the next few years, and there's no reason we shouldn't be in the top 10, contending for a national championship year in and year out. We will be accomplishing big things on a national level, but we need to step things up a notch."

Schuette should know. In just six years as the Pepperdine head coach, Schuette guided the Waves to four conference championships and two top 20 finishes, No. 19 in 1993 and No. 16 in 1994.

"Kurt is a well-respected and successful coach," USC athletic director Mike Garrett said. "I believe he has the ability and know-how to bring USC golf back to the level when we were competitive year after year and on the verge of winning national championships."

To begin that climb, Schuette will rely on two returners, Cory Okuna and Chad Wright.

Okuna, a senior from Hilo, Hawaii, averaged 74.8 strokes per round last year and finished 19th at the NCAA Western Regionals in Tucson, Ariz.

"Cory has lots of experience, and it seems he plays his best at the end of the year, when he's playing in the most important tournaments," Schuette said. "Cory's real strength is his clutch performances."

Wright, a freshman phenom last year from Ventura, Calif., finished with the second-best average on the Trojan team, 74.2, and appeared in all 14 tournaments last season.

"Chad was one of the top freshmen in the country last year," Schuette said. "He's gained more experience this summer, playing in some high-caliber tournaments, which have led to some nice overall improvements in his game."

Also returning for the Trojans are Mark Nicoletti (75.9 average), Justin Boatman (75.9), Jason Lowe (78.8) and Chris Johnson (77.6), who shot a season-best round for the Trojans of 67 last year.

"I look for Chris to do some good things for us this year," Schuette said. "He fired a 63 this summer in the Washington State Open during medal play, which was pretty impressive. He's showing signs of breaking through in a big way."

The new coach also expects some new faces to step right up to the tee. Sophomore Scott Richardson and freshman Roger Tambellini are ready for the championship future to start now.

"Scott is a very talented golfer who had a great record in junior tournaments. He's a potential All-Pac-10 player," Schuette said.

He's also a second-generation Trojan. His father, Kemp Richardson, was an All-American at USC in 1967 and 1968.

Schuette also had high praise for his other recruit: "Roger is one of the top prospects out of Northern California. He'll step in and compete right away."

USC Notes: The men's golf team begins its season today with a tournament in Albuquerque, N.M., while the women have the University of Iowa Invitational starting Saturday.

Like a Jules Verne novel, only shorter

Around the sports world in 80 inches (actually, 27) . . .

It's time to abolish all of the college football polls and just have a playoff system. In only three weeks, pollsters have shown us again this season that they still have learned nothing.

Who's No. 1? Florida in the beginning. Then Nebraska wins big and Florida doesn't play, so Nebraska's No. 1. Then Florida and Nebraska both win big, so it's back to Florida.

MAKE UP YOUR MIND.

And how's this for an injustice — one ranked team (team A) beats another ranked team (team B). Eight days later, team A loses to another ranked team, while team B defeats another ranked team.

The polls then put team B ahead of team A — even though team A just defeated team B!

Crazy, isn't it? But how about the Associated Press' No. 17 team, USC, beating No. 23 Washington, 24-17, in the first week. Then, after No. 14 USC falls to No. 8 Penn State and No. 25 Washington beats No. 18 Ohio State, the media puts Washington at No. 19, USC at No. 20.

Just the first of many inconsistencies to come from the voters . . .

With that in mind, here's the Roger Horne Top 10, which, in all likelihood, is more correct than what you'll see anywhere else.

No. 1: Nebraska. Get ready for a rout this weekend in Lincoln, Neb., when the Cornhuskers host UCLA.

No. 2: Penn State. Saturday's game was not a fluke.

No. 3: Florida.

No. 4: Michigan.

No. 5: Miami.

No. 6: Notre Dame.

No. 7: Florida State.

No. 8: Auburn.

No. 9: Colorado.

No. 10: Wisconsin.

Just you wait and see, I should be the one controlling the polls . . .

Stanford is quickly turning into Notre Dame West — except for the fact the Cardinal can't seem to win.

Both schools have evil coaches, and Stanford's now getting the calls usually reserved for those with the luck o' the Irish.

Case in point: Saturday at Dyche Stadium in Evanston, Ill., Stanford vs. Northwestern.

Stanford shouldn't need any help in beating Northwestern. But it required some intervention on behalf of some clueless officials to pull out a tie.

(Wasn't it Sport Magazine that called the Cardinal the dark horse for the national championship? Riiiiight.)

With Northwestern leading early, 10-7, Stanford's Mike Mitchell took the ball from the Wildcat 7-yard line up the middle. At the 2, he was hit by a defender, and

Women of Troy defeat USD

Third victory surpasses 1993 total

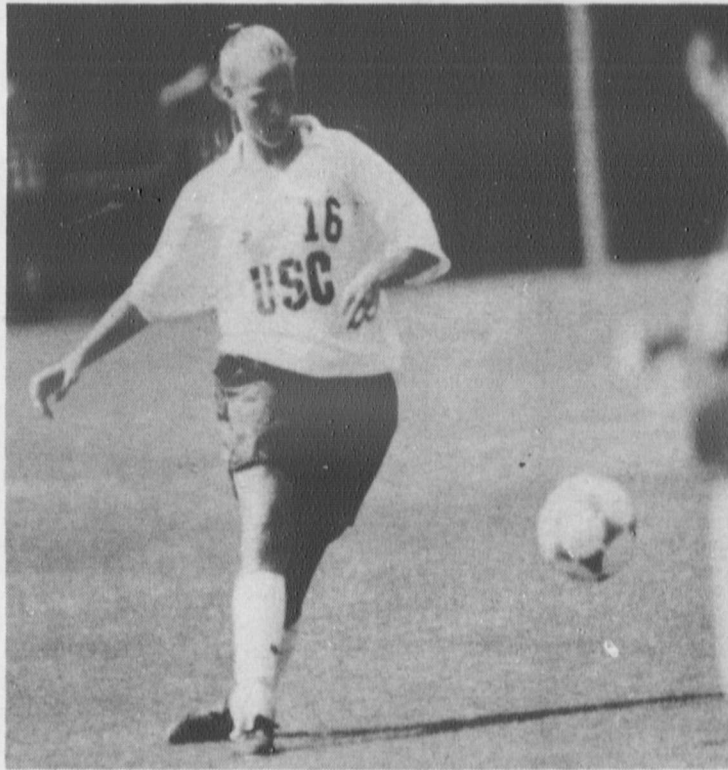

By Greg Keraghosian
Staff Writer

Already having raised some eyebrows this season, the USC women's soccer team pulled off its most impressive feat yet, upsetting a formidable University of San Diego squad Tuesday at Torero Stadium, 3-1, to run its record to 3-1-1.

In beating the Toreros (2-3), the Women of Troy have now accomplished in five contests what they could not do in 19 last year in its first season of play — win three games.

"We have a short history, but it's still the greatest victory this program has had," USC Coach Karen Stanley said. "We came out so unbelievably fired up, it was amazing. We played 90 minutes against a great soccer team. Sometimes in soccer the best team doesn't win, but we beat them in terms of both goals and play on the field."

For the third time this year, USC scored the game's first goal. Not coincidentally, it has won all three, tying and losing the two meetings in which it did not strike first.

After a 3-1 win over the University of San Diego, the USC women's soccer team has won more games than the inaugural 1993 squad.

Sophomore midfielder Maggie Merritt did the honors five minutes into action, taking in a short corner kick by freshman midfielder Erin Bailey and drilling a shot past San Diego goalkeeper Allison Worden.

The Women of Troy would later take a 2-0 advantage. Roughly 10 minutes after Merritt's goal, freshman forward Allison Shearer found herself in a familiar position, a breakaway. Shearer had failed to convert on a similar opportunity just days ago against UC Santa Barbara, but would redeem herself by taking in the Merritt pass and knocking the ball past Worden. "Normally, (Shearer) would have shot it earlier," Stanley said. "But we knew that (Worden) never got off her line, which is wrong, and Allison waited and got a good shot off. She showed great patience."

San Diego tallied its only goal with less than a minute to go in the first half, when defender Kristin Campbell hit a point-blank shot from a crossing pass past senior goalkeeper Laura Badagliacco to cut the USC lead in half.

The second half was in large part a defensive struggle, with the Women of Troy protecting their lead behind a defense that for a change had some depth. Tri-captain Stephanie Roberts — recently mended from an injury — saw her first action of the year as a sub, as did freshman Diana Nunez, who impressed the coaching staff more than anybody with her defensive effort.

"(Nunez) didn't make a mistake in the 20 minutes she played," Stanley said. "She will definitely get more playing time."

San Diego would never make a serious run. With less than three minutes left, freshman Chris Baroni — the team's other defensive substitution — put the game away and culminated the scoring on a goal from the right post.

Baumgartner eager after finishing No. 2

Schuette becomes third men's coach in three seasons

Tee for two.

Nice song. Cute lyrics. Unless you were within putting distance of No. 1 and a national championship. Then it gets you a bit steamed and anxious for next year.

After finishing the runner-up in the national tournament last year, USC women's golf coach Renee Baumgartner is ready to clean up some unfinished business.

"A lot of people think that USC is going to fall off the ladder since we lost three starters, called the best recruiting class ever when they first came here," Baumgartner said. "But we're going to be very good."

"Our goal is to finish in the top five at nationals."

Leading the charge for the Women of Troy will be senior Jennifer Biehn from Scottsdale, Ariz., who won the Pacific 10 Conference's individual championship last year and was selected as a preseason third-team All-American.

"Jennifer was the most improved college player in the country last year," Baumgartner said. "She has a solid all-around game and is a super leader on and off the golf course."

Baumgartner will also rely on junior Jill Hamasaki for some leadership. A preseason third-team All-American pick by Golf Week, Hamasaki has the experience of two full seasons with the Women of Troy.

"Jill improved a lot from her freshman year to her sophomore year," Baumgartner said. "I'll be looking for her leadership, experience and talent to help us and keep USC on top."

And that will have to go for both players. Biehn and Hamasaki lead a young, albeit talented, bunch.

Three freshmen and two sophomore transfers are expected to bolster the Trojan attack.

Colleen McGough, from Huntington Beach, and Leanne Wong, from Los Angeles, are the two sophomores expected to be top players in the very near future. Baumgartner believes it will be sooner rather than later.

Waiting in the wings will be the freshman trio of Holly Carriker of San Antonio, Ida Danielsson, of Ljungby, Sweden, and Danielle LaVoie, of Napa, Calif.

"These three freshman are very strong and will be pushing the older girls for a spot on the rotation," said the second-year coach who isn't the least bit hesitant of playing with such a young squad.

"The team looks very encouraging," said Baumgartner.
